MEDIA ANNOUNCEMENT

FoodWorks' WA stores extend membership

FoodWorks today announced its 20 stores in Western Australia have signed its new national standard Unity Agreement to remain with the FoodWorks network.

These stores represent more than 11 per cent of the Company's volume and are the first to embrace FoodWorks' newly available national Standard Unity Agreement.

FoodWorks CEO Rick Wight said, "By securing the ongoing partnership with our WA stores, FoodWorks remains a truly national business with a strong WA base to further build the brand and accelerate growth in the Western Australian market."

Spokesman for the WA stores, Peter Kapinga, said, "FoodWorks has values and ambitions that fit with our culture and business objectives and we're delighted to secure our stores' future by continuing our strong relationship with FoodWorks."

"The FoodWorks stores in WA have created a strong and valuable working relationship with the FoodWorks group nationally and are keen to continue this arrangement," he said.

The national Standard Unity Agreement is now available to all FoodWorks stores who will advantage immediately from the additional benefits the new agreement offers.
